Canadian Kilometer Achiever Program (C-KAP) is a national fitness incentive program that dates back to 1976. That year, groups of cyclists from across Canada traveled from province to province to their final destination of the Olympics in Montreal, Quebec. The goal of the program is to encourage participants to improve their health and lifestyle through cycling. The program has encouraged over 1,200 cyclists, on a voluntary basis, to log their daily kilometers throughout the year. The cumulative cycling distance of C-KAP participants is over 18 million kilometers.

Tour du Canada is a national network of cyclists whose mandate includes the promotion of interprovincial cycling. The club has more than 350 active members throughout the country and in various parts of the world. The Tour du Canada organization conducts the annual cross-Canada bicycle ride. Tour du Canada was first staged in 1988 and is the longest annual bike ride in the world. Riders visit all ten Canadian provinces during the high summer months. As of 2007 over 600 participants will have completed the 7500 kilometre cross-country ride. The age range of participants to date is 14 to 73.
